

February 15, 1952

Dr. Tracy M. Sonneborn
Zoology Department
Indiana University
Bloomington, Indiana

Dear Tracy:

Thank you for sending the abstract of your talk at Cincinnati. I don't have anything comparable, but am transmitting via Dave Skaar a recent progress report from which my presentation will be constructed. I will have nothing to add to your remarks on the relationship of genetic to cancer research.

An itinerary has occurred to me that might give us more time together, especially to discuss the book. I will be in Chicago, anyhow, the weekend of the 29th. I thought that we (Esther and I) might drive down to Bloomington Sunday, and spend the afternoon and evening with you. Monday morning, if you liked, we could drive on to Cincinnati together, and hope to get there on time not to miss any important papers (if there are any). For my part, I want to spend as little time in Cinn. as possible. If this is objectionable, perhaps we could make a comparable arrangement for the return trip, leaving Cincinnati Wednesday PM. Our hotel reservations (at the Terrace-Plaza) are already compatible with a Monday arrival; if yours are not, a one-day's postponement should offer no difficulty.

Sincerely,

Joshua Federberg